Interview mit Ivo Knüll:

Wann ist Kirche attraktiv für Kooperationen?

A photograph of Bishop Markus addressing a group of people in a room with large windows and hand-drawn wall art. The Bishop is standing in the center, wearing a dark suit and glasses, gesturing with his hands. A woman in a dark top and orange pants stands next to him, holding a paper. The room is filled with people sitting at wooden tables, listening. The walls are covered in hand-drawn sketches and text, including a large drawing of a fox and various phrases like 'GLÜCK UNSCH', 'LESER SCHADET DUMMHEIT', and 'HEI!'. The room has large windows looking out at a dark sky, and several pendant lights hang from the ceiling.
